Wick

Close the lid.
The agents stay late.

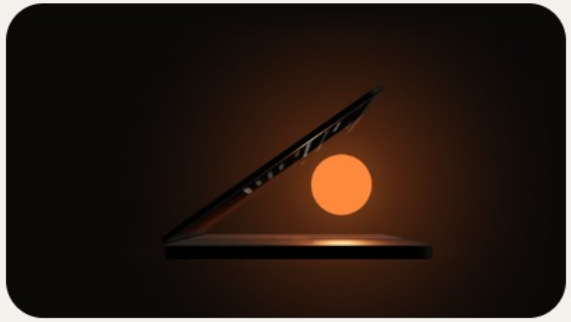

VERSION 0.3 · NOVEMBER 2026

A wick is small, patient, and still burning when everything else has gone quiet.

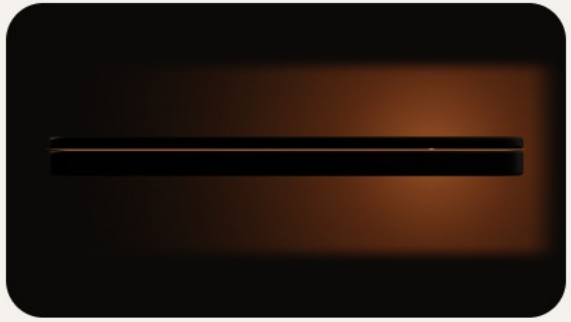

Wick keeps a laptop awake with the lid closed, so the work that was running keeps running. Then it puts sleep back. The whole identity comes from that one picture: a closed thing with a light still on inside.

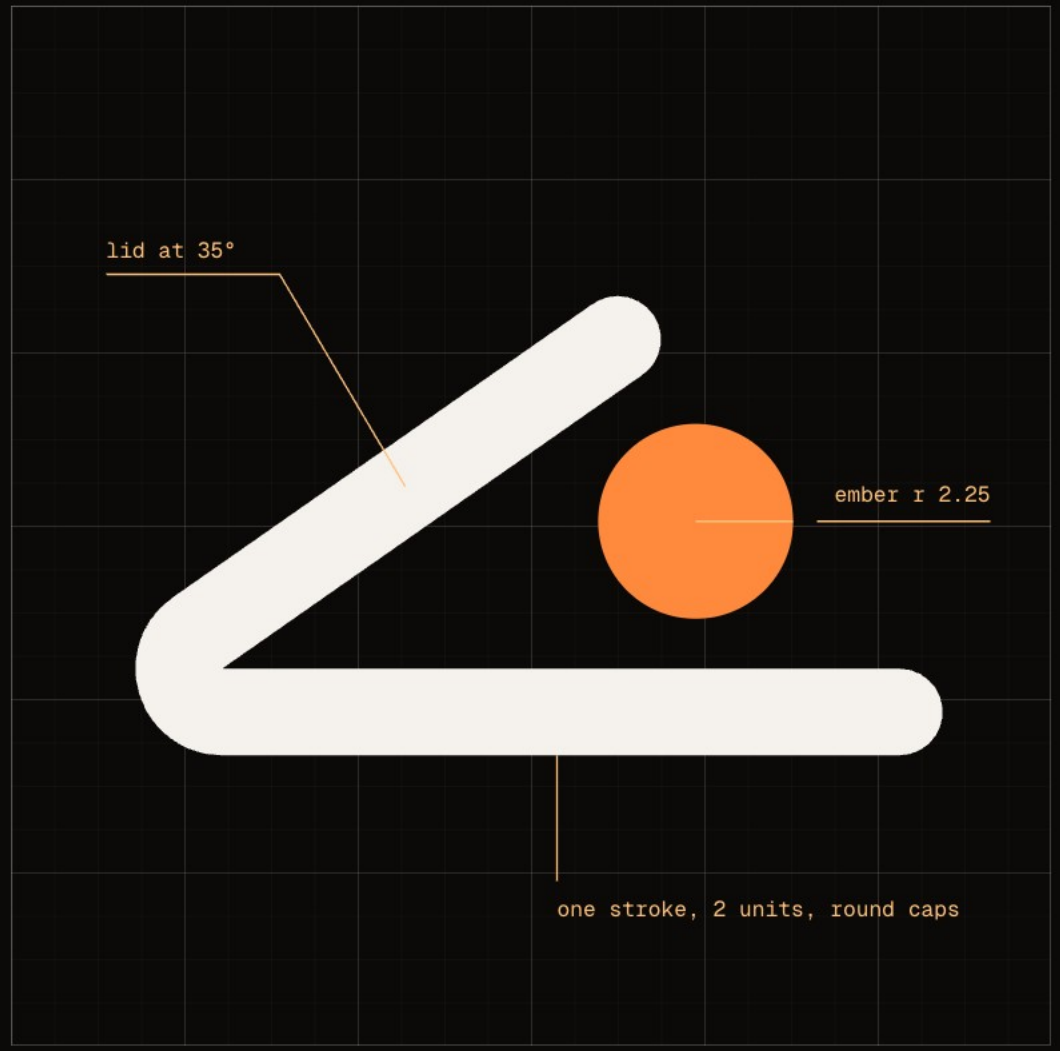

Open. An agent at work on the screen.

Ajar. Seen from the side at 35 degrees, with the ember inside. This is the mark.

Shut. Two lines with a seam of light between them. Also a wick.

One stroke and one dot.

A laptop from the side with its lid just ajar, and the ember lit inside it. The mark sits on a 24 unit grid. Its single stroke is 2 units wide with round caps and joins. The ember has a radius of 2.25.

CLEAR SPACE	One ember, 4.5 units, on every side
SMALLEST SIZE	16 px. Below that, use the one colour mark
MENU BAR	A template glyph, so it takes the bar's colour. Filled ember means awake

One ember per composition.

In the lockup, the mark has it. When the word stands alone, it moves to the i, where the tittle becomes a circle of the same area. Never both at once.

LOCKUP. THE DEFAULT

LOCKUP, ON DARK

WORDMARK ALONE. LARGE SIZES: FOOTERS, POSTERS, COVERS

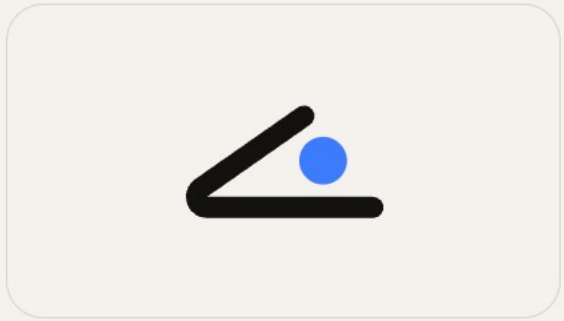

WORDMARK, ON LIGHT

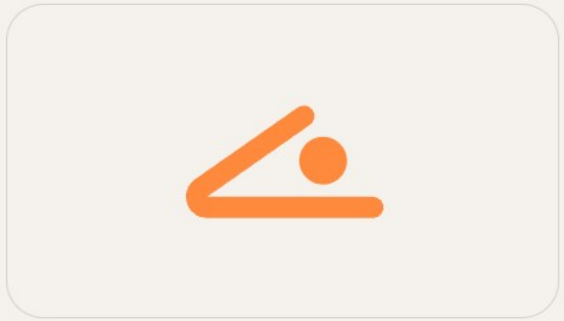

ONE COLOUR, FOR PRINT AND ENGRAVING

It's two shapes. Leave them be.

The files in `brand/logo` are the logo. The word is outlined, so it never needs retyping.

× Don't recolour the ember

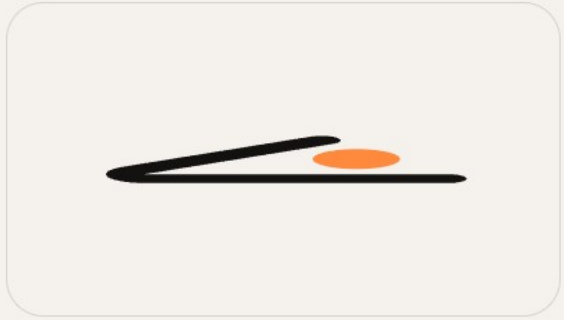

× Don't make the lid ember too

× Don't put the ember out

× Don't tilt it. The base is a desk

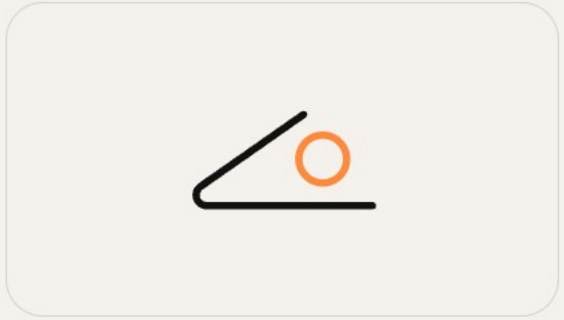

× Don't stretch it

× Don't set it on ember. The dot disappears

× Don't light two embers

× Don't thin it or outline it

If it's ember, it's on.

Ember only ever means awake. Not links, not selection, not decoration. When the session stops, every ember on the screen goes out, including the one in the logo.

brew install --cask

Small labels are mono capitals at +0.06em.

INSIDE THE APP

San Francisco

The system font, as on any Mac app. The panel is not the place to be a brand.

ROLE	SIZE	LEADING	TRACKING
Hero	10.6vw, up to 208 px	0.88	-0.058em
Title	6.7vw, up to 118 px	0.94	-0.05em
Heading	22 to 30 px	1.08	-0.035em
Lead	17 to 22 px	1.42	0
Label	12.5 px, mono capitals	1.5	+0.06em

Deadpan. Short. Exact where it matters.

1. The joke goes in the headline, the fact goes in the sentence. The headline says we won't cook your laptop. The sentence says 45°C, lid closed, 60 seconds.
2. The laptop is the straight man. Give the machine opinions. Never tease the person using it.
3. Numbers are never rounded for effect. 20%, 90 seconds, five minutes. If the app does it, the page says it the same way.
4. Say what stopped, and why. A session that ends always ends with a plain sentence.
5. No exclamation marks and no emoji. The ember is the only thing allowed to glow.

INSTEAD OF	WICK SAYS
~~Seamlessly empower your workflow~~	Close the lid. The agents stay late.
~~Advanced thermal management~~	We will not cook your laptop.
~~Session terminated: thermal event~~	Stopped to let the Mac cool down.
~~Supports all major AI agents~~	It knows who's on shift.
~~Privacy first analytics~~	This page doesn't know you're here.
~~Robust fail safe architecture~~	It always puts sleep back.

The light comes from inside, or from below.

Never from a spotlight, never from a gradient laid on top. There is one laptop, drawn the same way everywhere, and it's dark unless it's lit by its own ember.

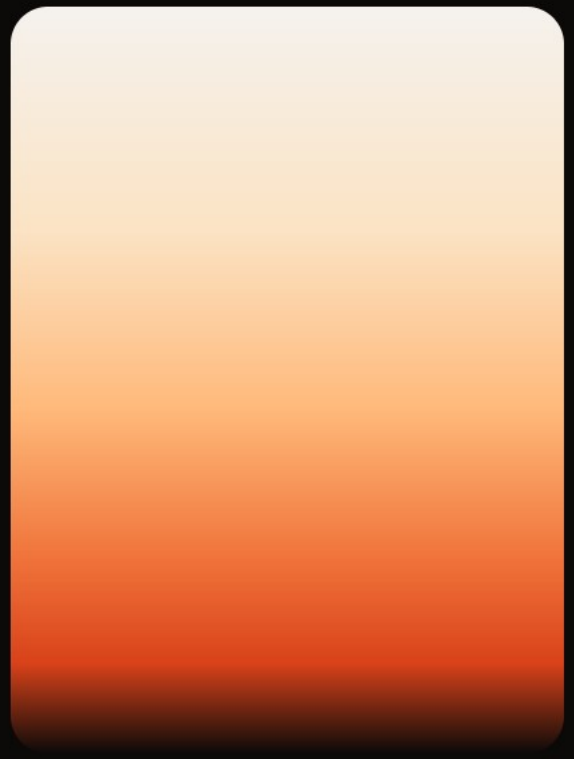

The coal. A Blender render, dithered so the dark end doesn't band. It rises from the bottom edge

The seam. Shut and awake, a line of light escapes all the way round, and gathers at the front

Heat is Deep, never ember. Ember means awake. Too hot is a different colour, on purpose

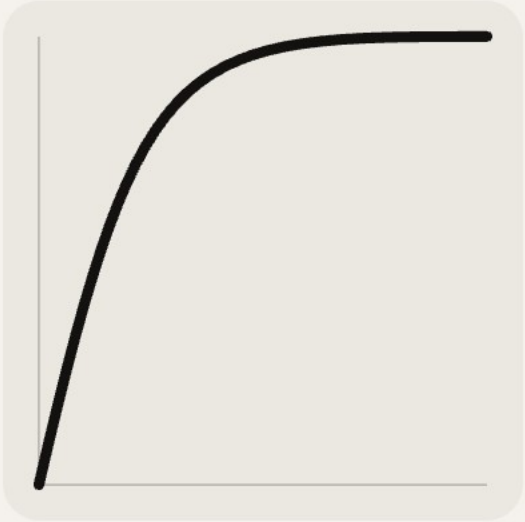

Dusk and dawn. Paper never fades to night through grey. It goes through a sunset

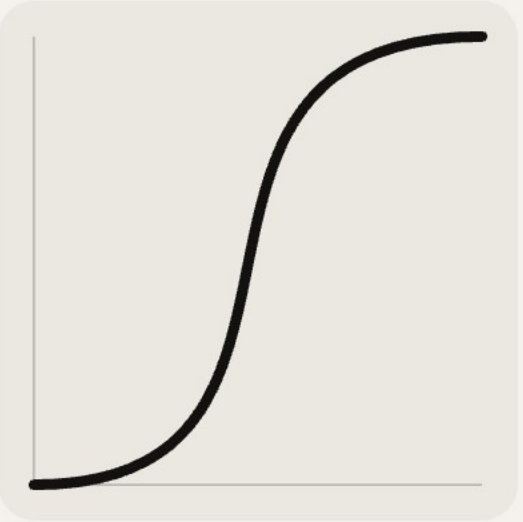

The lid follows your hand.

On the website, scrolling and dragging move the same value, so the lid can be stopped, reversed and let go at any point. Nothing plays at you. Inside the app, things that are used all day don't animate at all.

PRESS	Scale to 0.97, 100 to 160 ms
INTERFACE	Under 250 ms, ease out. Never ease in
THE RULER	A critically damped spring that keeps the velocity of the throw
THE EMBER	Flickers by 5%, irregularly, like a coal. It goes out over a moment, never in one frame
REDUCED MOTION	Stills and plain flow. The page loses nothing it needs

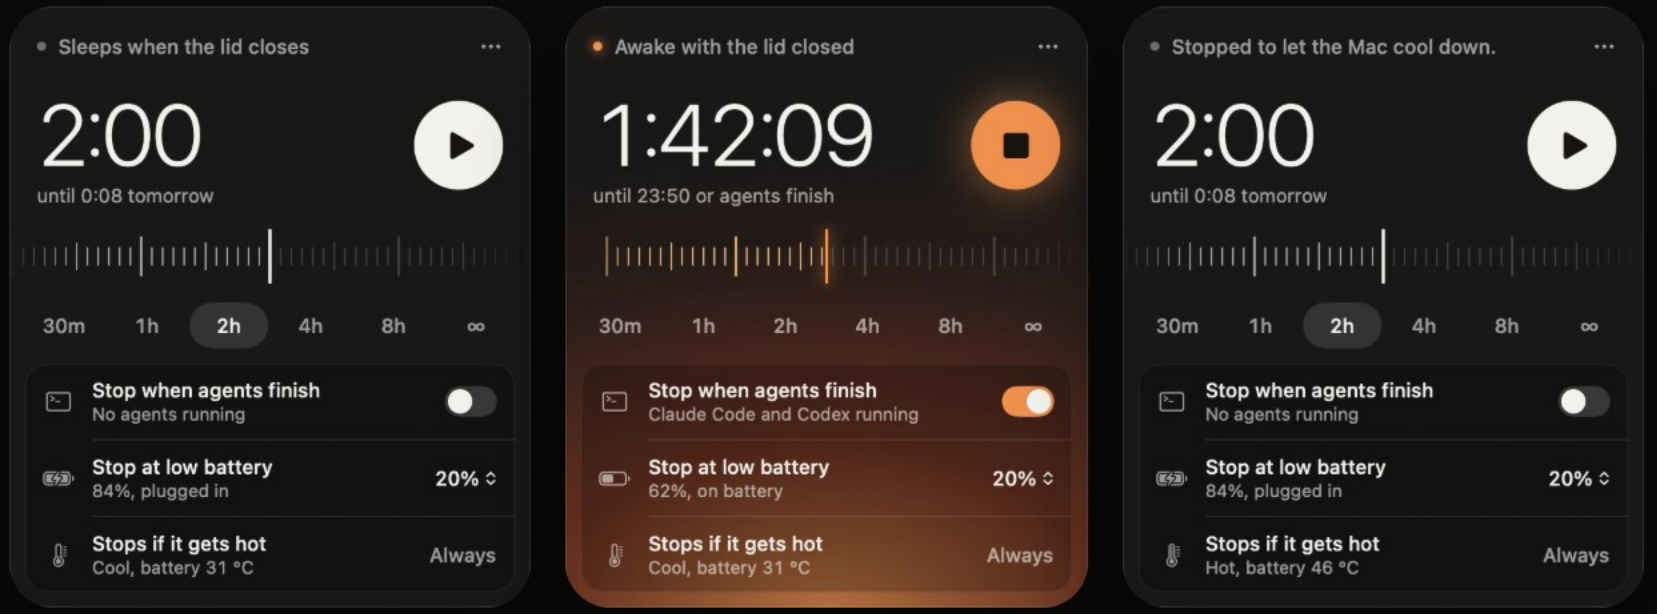

Out
`cubic-bezier(0.23, 1, 0.32, 1)`
Things arriving and leaving

In and out
`cubic-bezier(0.77, 0, 0.175, 1)`
Things moving across the screen

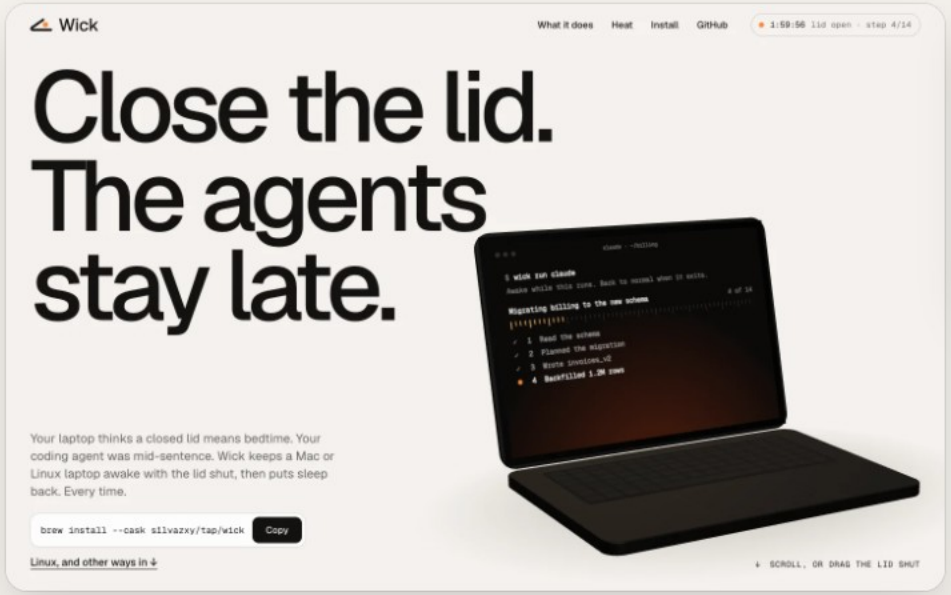

App icon. Liquid Glass layers from Icon Composer, the light rendered in Blender

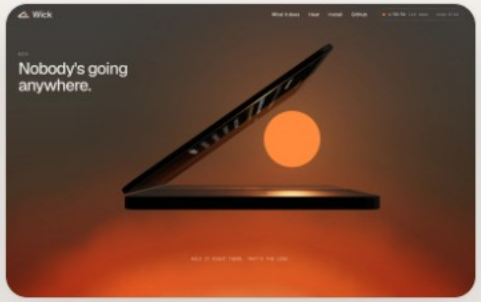

The panel. Idle, awake, and stopped for heat. The glow is only there while the session is

Menu bar. Hollow when the Mac is on its own, filled with the time left when Wick is holding it awake

Day. The page opens as the laptop does

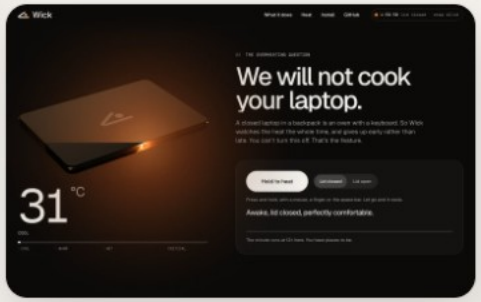

Half way down. The logo, in three dimensions

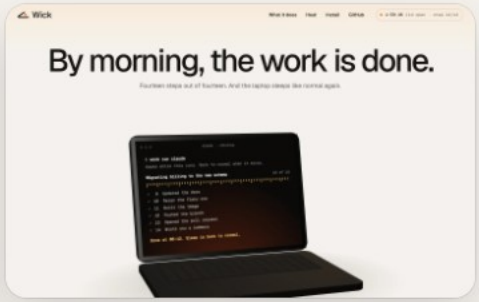

Night. Shut, and still lit

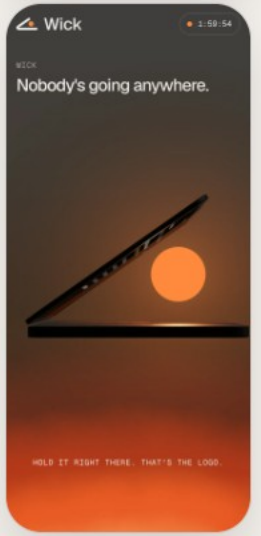

Heat. A demo of the one rule with no switch

Dawn. Fourteen of fourteen
